More infected mosquitoes found on APG

Yvonne Johnson APG News

Kirk U.S. Army Health Clinic reported three additional mosquito traps tested positive for the West Nile Virus in the Aberdeen area of Aberdeen Proving Ground. It is the second time in two weeks the virus has turned up on the installation.

The positive findings were from traps removed from Plumb Point Loop, the Aberdeen Trailer Park and from the U.S. Army Ordnance Mechanical Maintenance School's Field Training Site," said 1st Lt. Chandra Parrie, chief, Environmental Health, KUSAHC Preventive Medicine Department. The initial WNV finding, reported in the Aug. 7 issue of APG News, also came from the Plumb Point Loop area.

Parrie said the U.S. Army Center for Health Promotion and Preventive Medicine – North at Fort Meade confirmed the WNV presence Aug. 8 with a Polymerase Chain Reaction or PCR test after an initial Vectest conducted at APG tested positive.

She said that the second finding confirms that the virus is "definitely" present on APG.

"This means we really need to get information about preventive measures out to people," Parrie said. "A big part of that is eliminating standing water and other breeding sites."

Breeding sites found in the trailer park and Plumb Point Loop areas included tires and children's toys filled with rainwater, and puddled water around one quarter's roof gutter drain, she said.

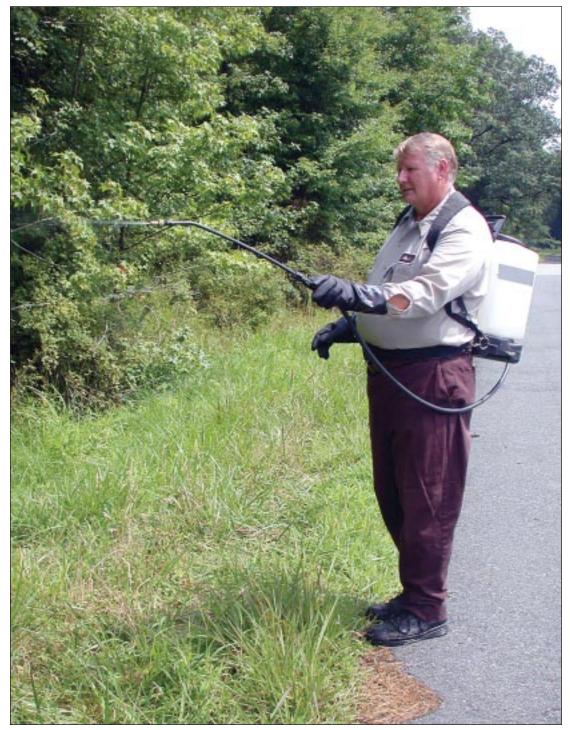

"All that we found we emptied and all had mosquito larvae in them," Parrie said. In addition to vigorous fogging of the affected areas by Pest Control personnel from the Garrison Entomology Activity, preventive medicine soldiers will conduct walk-thru spraying with backpack-type tank sprayers, Parrie said. "This will enable them to walk through areas fogging can't Dori Lawton, education services specialist, said soldiers, parents and prospective students should not miss the event, which focuses on educational opportunities in this area.

"The opportunities are endless," Lawton said. "Nearly every organization offers online or resident courses whether you're going for a certificate

'With online and veteran-oriented services, it can even benefit those leaving the military or the area," she said.

Representatives from the American Council on Education, which converts military experience to college credit, and Excelsior College, which offers external degrees, will be on hand as well as personnel from the Veterans Administration, the Troops-to-Teachers program, financial aid counselors and Army Green to Gold recruiters from Morgan State University.

The Green-to-Gold program, which offers enlisted service members the chance to attend college full-time and College; DeVry University; Florida re-enter the military as second lieutenants, is not exclusive to Morgan State University, Lawton said.

"The Morgan State representatives will have information covering Green-to-Gold programs," she said.

Refreshments will be available and the event is open to family members and civilians.

Participating institutions for the Aug. 21 College Fair include Cecil Community College; Central Texas College; Community Colleges of Baltimore; Cecil Community College; Central Michigan University; College of Notre Dame of Maryland; Coppin State

Ordnance Corps leadership to change

E.C. Starnes

The Army's second largest branch will have a new leader on Aug. 15 as Brig. Gen. William N. Lanaers succeeds Maj. Gen. Mitchell H. Stevenson as the chief of ordnance, and commanding general and commandant of the U.S. Army Ordnance Center and

The ceremony will get underway at 9 a.m. on Fanshaw Field.

Lenaers comes to APG from Fort Hood, Texas, where he was the commanding general of the 13th Corps Support Command.

Stevenson, who became the 31st chief of ordnance on July 25, 2000, is moving to the U.S. Army Materiel Command as the deputy chief of staff for logistics and operations.

The Reviewing Officer will be Gen. Kevin P.

Byrnes, commanding general of the U.S. Army Training and Doctrine Command at Fort Monroe, Va.

Also participating as members of the ceremonial party will be Lt. Gen. James R. Helmly, chief of Army Reserve and commanding general, U.S. Army Reserve Command; and Command Sgt. Maj. Timothy D. Ayers, Regimental Command Sergeant Major. Helmly is the senior active duty ordnance officer.

Serving as the honor contingent for the change of command will be the U.S. Army Ordnance Mechanical Maintenance School and 61st Ordnance Brigade, commanded by Col. Paul D. Meredith and Command Sgt. Maj. Manuel Torres; the U.S. Army Ordnance Munitions and Electronic Maintenance School and 59th Ordnance Brigade, commanded by Col. Joyce B. Napier and Command Sgt. Maj. Lewis C. The U.S. Army Aberdeen Proving Ground Garrison dining facility in building 4503 has been named a finalist in the annual Philip A. Connelly Excellence in Food Service Awards competition for the northeast region. Ed Parylo, installation executive program manager for food service, said the selection is a "big deal" for the staff and the installation.

"It's been quite a few years since we were selected to compete and even then we didn't represent the region," Parylo said.

He commended dining facility manager Gerard Laruffa and his staff for providing overall good quality food and

"Evaluators come through and look at each facility in the areas of cleanliness, food quality, sanitation and others," Parylo said. "To be judged best overall speaks for the combined effort of the entire staff.

Future Warrior returns with changes

Curt Biberdorf

U.S. Army Soldier Systems Center

Nothing works on Future Warrior, and that's the way it's supposed to be. The uniform ensemble, first assembled at the U.S. Army Soldier Systems Center, in 1999, was redesigned for 2003 to better depict technology decades from reality for soldiers.

While the Objective Force Warrior soldier weapon platform prepares for fielding within the decade, Future Warrior is set apart as a mostly visionary tool for researchers, said Cheryl Stewardson, the integrated protection functional area leader for the Natick Soldier Center's OFW

Future Warrior was reintroduced at the May 22 opening of the Institute for Soldier Nanotechnologies, a new partnership between the Army and Massachusetts Institute of Technolo-

"We wanted to showcase now the concepts they're working on for the future," she said. "Seeing [concepts] on a human form helps us see how [technologies] might be used and their limitations."

During the past three years, scientists and engineers have experimented with concepts to determine their feasibility with OFW, Stewardson said.

What's out of bounds for OFW ended up on Future Warrior.

Looking menacing in an all-black, custom-fit uniform from head to toe, Future Warrior is portrayed by Sgt. Raul Lopez, liaison sergeant with the Operational Forces Interface Group.

Replacing the modified motorcycle helmet used in the previous Future Warrior concept, the custom-designed helmet Lopez wears is leaner and incorporates several features representing upcoming technology. A blue-tinted visor signifies agile eye protection against tunable lasers, while inside a new projection display technology based off the Joint Strike Fighter helmet is now more accurately shown.

"We have sensors now for thermal and image intensification, but making them small enough, fusing the images and projecting them onto the visor, that's the leap," Stewardson said.

Openings at the top of the helmet fit in with the idea of a 3-D audio and visual sensor suite. They restore natural hearing lost in an encapsulated space and enhance long-range hearing. Cameras enhance vision from the sides and behind. A smaller halo on the helmet represents a tracking system for friendly and enemy forces. By reshaping the helmet, Future Warrior has an expanded field of view.

Protection against chemical and biological agents is more realistic with a respirator tube that attaches to the back of the helmet and con-air into the helmet for comfort and visor defog-

"It was envisioned to come down very sleek into the body, but we couldn't find a material to do it in the short time we had to put this concept prototype together," Stewardson said.

Another major change in the uniform is the addition of protruding, interconnecting black pieces of plastic on the legs that represent a lower-body exoskeleton. It will connect through the boots up to the waist and enable the wearer the ability to carry up to 200 pounds.

Above the waist, MIT's research on nanomuscles for advanced arm and torso strength may be linked to the exoskeleton to give Future Warrior potentially superhuman ability to move or carry. A flexible display on the forearm of Future Warrior glows when switched on and draws attention to the simulated touch screen keypad for information input and output for tasks such as navigation, physiological status monitoring and command communication. The display is connected into a compact computer worn on an armored belt around the waist.

Attached to the arm is a slim box representative of the remote control unit for any system that might be used, such as a robotic mule or unmanned aerial vehicle.

Found near the top of the torso front and back are what look like quarter-sized buttons built into the fabric depicting a nanostructure sensor array to detect weapons of mass destruction, friendly or enemy lasers, or even weather.

"[The sensors] could trigger a response in the uniform to open or close the fibers depending on temperature or precipitation," Stewardson

Black was chosen as the color to clue observers that it's the future, she said, although the aim is for a uniform that's invisible.

Speaking of stealth, much of the futuristic capability can't be shown at least in part because of nanotechnology.

Along the black stretch fabric are custom-fitted plastics and foams that take the place of liquid body armor that will instantly solidify when "All the parts are much harder than we wanted. We haven't figured out how to portray [liquid armor]," Stewardson said.

Through nanotechnology, multifunctional materials will be able to transport power and data. The materials will also be able to fend off chemical and biological agent attacks, selfdecontaminate and become waterproof.

"I believe nanotechnology is going to give us much more than we can even envision today. This is just a sampling," Stewardson said.

In many ways, the revised Future Warrior is the next greatest thing.

"There's always going to be a Future Warrior," Stewardson said. "In the soldier business, you can never rest on your laurels. Somebody is always out there to beat you."

Garrison chaplain plans meaningful tour at APG

Van Schenkhof comes to APG from her position as the deputy command chaplain at the U.S. Army Materiel Command headquarters in Arlington, Va.

A native of Reading, Penn., Van Schenkhof said she is looking forward to her first tour at APG.

"I love this area. The quiet and the greenery is nicer than the [Washington] D.C. area," Van Schenkhof said.

"Getting to know the community and familiarizing myself with the various religious programs will be my biggest challenge," she added. Citing the Protestant, Islamic, Catholic,

Gospel, Latter Day Saints and Jewish services and programs already offered, Van Schenkhof said that she "can't think of any religious needs that are not being met."

"I am very approachable," she added. "I welcome suggestions from the community on how we can improve our programs."

She said she would like to initiate more youth-oriented programs in the services.

"Youths are very important to the church's future," Van Schenkhof said. "We have to pay careful attention to their needs."

A chaplain for more than 17 years, Van Schenkhof was the first female chaplain assigned to the correctional facility formerly at Fort Riley, Kan. She also served at correctional facilities at Fort Leavenworth, Mo., and in Mannheim, Germany.

VanSchenkhof holds a sociology degree from Thiel College in Greenville, Penn., and a See CHAPLAIN, page 10

To ensure the health and safety of all residents, it is recommended that adults, children and pets remain indoors when the fog generator passes through their areas. Parents should explain to their children that the fog is a pesticide used for killing mosquitoes and other flying insects, and that under no circumstances should the truck be followed or the pesticide inhaled. Pest control personnel will make every effort to avoid accidentally exposing residents to the fogging material. Motorists are reminded to avoid the fogging route during spraying. For more information, or to report a planned outdoor event on a fogging day, call 410-278-intramural golf championship for HHC 143rd.

Utter and Lewis defeated Mark Samman and Brian Oldham of the U.S. Army Medical Research Institute for Chemical Defense.

Ewing, playing on his first intramural team, said things just clicked for the duo throughout the season.

"We were undefeated whenever we played together," Ewing said.

"We got along well, understood each other's capabilities and learned what to expect from each other," added Utter.

Samman and Oldham said things also clicked for them despite stiff competition.

"The competition was pretty good. It's been close the whole way," Oldham said, adding that the qualifying round for the finals was decided "on the last few holes."

"I loved playing and enjoyed the season," Samman added. "Considering what we were up against, I'm really surprised to be here."

Commentary-Arrival message Gen. Peter J. Schoomaker Chief of Staff of the Army

stood in the office of the Secretary of the Army and was sworn in as the 35th Chief of Staff of the Army. Thirty-four other distinguished leaders have preceded me — wellknown stewards of our Army. It is a great honor to walk in their footsteps.

Twenty-three ago I stood in another place — in the Iranian desert on a moonlit night at a place called Desert One. I keep a photo of the carnage that night to remind me that we should never confuse enthusiasm with capability. Eight of my comrades lost their lives. Those of us who survived knew grief ... we knew failure...but we committed ourselves to a different future.

There were some important things we did not know about the future that night. We did not recognize that this was a watershed event... that the military services would begin a great period of renewal that continues to this day. We did not know that we were at the start of an unprecedented movement to jointness in every aspect of our military culture, structure, and operations... a movement that must continue. We also did not realize that we were in one of the opening engagements of this country's long struggle against terrorism... a struggle that would reach our homeland and become known as the Global War on Terror.

Today, our nation is at war and we are a critical part of the joint team — an Army at war.

War is both a physical reality and a state of mind. War is ambiguous, uncertain, and unfair. When we are at war, we must think and act differently. We become more flexible and more adaptable. We must anticipate the ultimate reality check - combat. We must win both the war and the peace. We must be prepared to question everything. What is best for the nation? What must endure? What must change?

This war has demonstrated that our soldiers, civilians, and families are up to the task. It has also provided new insights into the current operating environment. Can we sustain our high performance with our current methods of preparareturn to what we knew before. As my great friend, Dick Meadows, always said, "The Army ain't like it used to be...and it never was."

Sustained engagement of our Army will be the norm, not the exception. How do we man the Army in a way that provides cohesive, high performing units in this reality of continuous engagement?

Our recent combat operations reinforce the requirements for units and echelons that are

We have already shown that we have innovative and adaptive leaders. But our enemies are adapting as well. Will our development programs continue to produce leaders who can meet this challenge?

Leadership and courage are easily recognized as prerequisites at the tactical level, but they are essential at the operational and strategic levels as well. Are we developing the George C. Marshalls for the new era?

The National Guard and Army Reserve are indispensable, full members of the team. Do we have the proper mix of both active and reserve units? Are we properly balanced? Is all of our structure readily accessible to meet the requirements of this and future wars?

As we transform the Army from the current force to the future force we must ask these questions and more. While some things will change, oth-

The American soldier remains indispensable. Our soldiers are paramount and will remain the centerpiece of our thinking, our systems, and our combat formations. As General Creighton Abrams taught us, "People are not in the Army, they are the Army."

We are, have been, and will remain a values based institution. Our values will not change and they are non-negotiable. Our soldiers are warriors of character. They exemplify these values every day and are the epitome of our American spirit. They are the heart of the Army. As long as the U.S. Army has existed, we have transformed...and we always will. For four years under Gen. Shinseki our Army has asked hard questions and made tough choices. We will continue to go where the answers to those questions take us. Our azimuth to the future is good. The Army must remain relevant and ready.

Our Army has much to be proud of. It is the preeminent land force in the world - and continues to be respected by our friends... and feared by our enemies. We set the standard. We were part of the joint team that defeated the Taliban in Afghanistan and took down a brutal regime in Iraq. Today we are deployed and conducting contingency operations at an unprecedented pace. Our soldiers, civilians, and their families set the standard every day for selfless service.

The Army continues to serve our great nation well and faithfully as it has in the past. For more than 228 years, the Army has never failed the American people, and it never

As an American soldier, I have never left your ranks; but it is a great privilege to wear our uniform once again.
